

Human Development A Look at Theories: Part I

Across

- 6. Watson's theory that states that experience guides behavior and development
- 9. Piaget's stage that states that preschoolers learn to use symbols, language, and pretend play to represent things that have been learned
- 11. Piaget's stage that states that infants learn primarily through the five physical senses.
- 12. Freud called this the central part of our personality
- 13. The art of teaching children
- 14. Piaget's theory that states that children construct their own learning

Down

- 1. Vygotsky's term for when adults or more advanced peers help a child up to the next level of learning
- 2. Ainsworth's theory about young children and how they relate to their parents
- 3. Vygotsky's theory that people and culture impact our growth and development
- 4. Freud's theory that all thoughts and activities are influenced by unconscious mind
- 5. Piaget's stage that states that logical, organized thinking appears in middle childhood
- 7. According to Freud, this is where our conscience lies
- 8. Pavlov stated that this creates learning through repeated experiences
- 10. The art of helping adults learn